experience*

1996 INTERLACHEN

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 1999). The number of people aged 85 and over has increased by 0.5 million.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for ageing, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. The strategy is based on three main principles: (1) to ensure that older people have the opportunity to live independently and actively; (2) to ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need; and (3) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity. The strategy is a key document for the development of policies and services for older people.

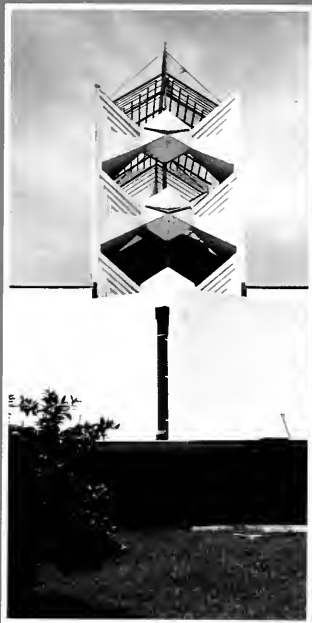

The strategy is based on the following assumptions: (1) that older people are a diverse group with different needs and interests; (2) that older people have the right to live independently and actively; (3) that older people have the right to access the services and support they need; and (4) that older people should be treated with respect and dignity. The strategy is a key document for the development of policies and services for older people.

The

Southern experience

Experience the lifestyle that Florida Southern has to offer because life is all about experience. One can make their stay at Florida Southern an experience to remember throughout their lifetime. Taking risks and learning through one's own experiences is the only way to live life to the fullest. The friends that one makes and the successes accomplished are enough to fill a book.

Campus Life

Experience

The Laughter

What is college, if not student life? Being away from home, students make new friends and learn a whole new way of life. Experiencing freedom and being on their own, students make life on campus all their own. Working, studying, and of course socializing, take up much of the students' time as they make their individual mark on campus. Good times and good friends are two things the students share with each other. Together, the student body works to make a great year while discovering things about themselves and the people around them. It is easy to see how everyone experiences the laughter.

Southern Living

Life on campus at FSC

This student realizes that between classes, friends, and responsibilities, college is a balancing act.

An adventurous student tries his luck at the Gyronaut at Clubfest.

This year on campus, students' lives were experiences made up of many different aspects. The one common denominator that students shared is their reason for originally being here- the academics. Yet, they soon all learned that most of their college life is to be experienced outside of the classroom. The reasons that they stayed here became varied. Everyone seemed to find little niches where they could be themselves. Life in the Residence Halls turned out to be an exciting and fun adventure where life long friends were made. Students joined clubs and organizations that interested them and found the benefits outweighed all of the hassles they sometimes caused. They volunteered in the community in different ways to help out wherever needed. No matter what students chose to do with their time, one thing was certain: the times that were shared and the memories that were made would not easily be forgotten. Students would someday look back upon their college years as fun and rewarding times. They would all walk away with the knowledge that they had learned from all of the experiences.

The fitness center offers students the chance to work out while also visiting with friends.

A group of students return from Lake Hollingsworth, a popular place for exercise and sunbathing.

Ryan Shae escapes from the dorm and heads off to the library for some quiet study time.

Two students enjoy a sandwich at an outdoor picnic.

The new veranda, a gift from the class of 1996, is enjoyed by many.

Southern Republic

It's a jungle in here!

Summer Perkins carefully catches a water balloon at the Gladiator Challenge.

Club Tacky is a fun filled night of dancing where many outrageous fashions are seen.

Life at FSC for all new students began with orientation or what is commonly known as O-week. The theme for O-Week 1995 was Southern Republic. It began on Friday when the new students moved their belongings into the dorms. The event which officially kicked off O-Week was the opening assembly, where President Reushling welcomed new students. The adventure truly began when all students were divided into teams named after safari animals for the various competitions of the week. Playfair was a great opportunity to meet new friends. The rest of the week was filled with many other activities designed to acquaint the new arrivals with college life. Students were given opportunities to meet and talk with professors. Gladiator Challenge, Club Tacky, and the Banana Split party were fun events that helped the students adjust in many different ways. The final event was the talent show. By the end of the week, it was agreed that a great time was had by all and many valuable lessons were learned.

The Gladiator Challenge is an exciting experience which makes some dizzy.

Money Matters

Things add up quickly!

Laundry is a necessary and costly chore that all students must face.

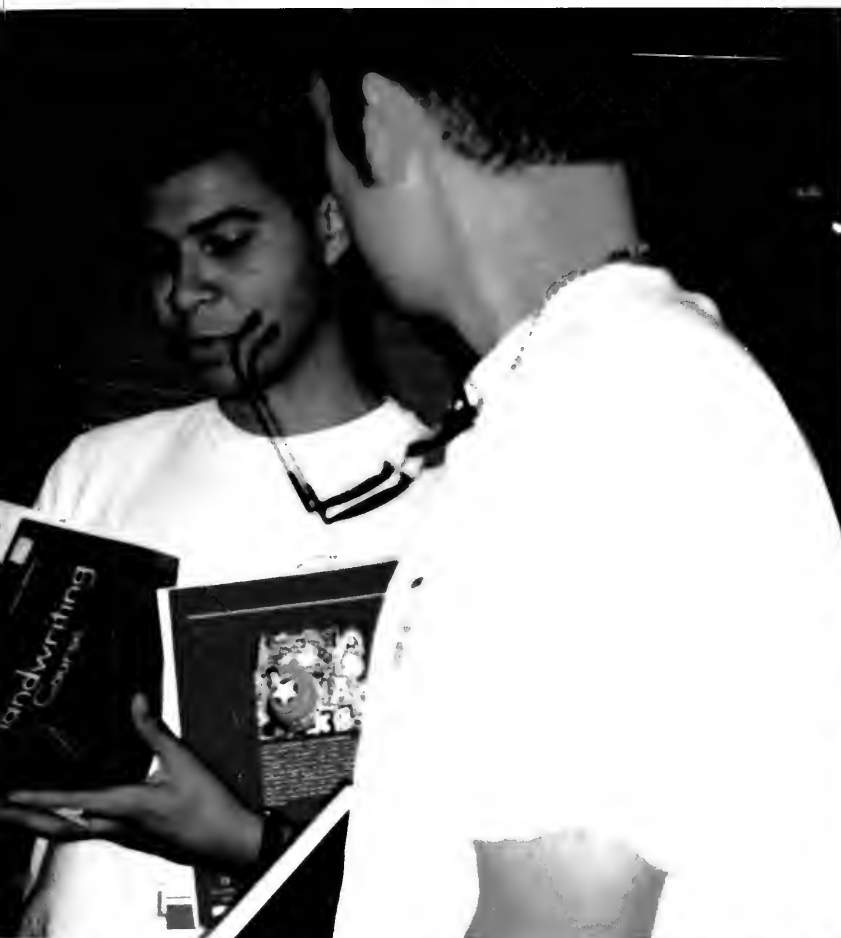

Students browse to find the best deal at the FSC bookstore.

Everyone agreed that money was an important part of students' lives, but where did the money come from this year? Was there a money tree somewhere? When students did have money to spend where did it all go? Although some very lucky students received their money from generous parents, most FSC students found some way to earn cash. The easiest and most common ways that students earned their money was by having a job. Students could either work on campus at work-study jobs or have employment off campus. On campus jobs varied from office work to answering phones to even helping teach science classes as lab assistants. The opportunities for off campus jobs were endless. When it came to spending, students found themselves with various expenses that came with being a college student. These expenses ranged from books and class fees to phone bills and club dues. The over used credit card also received a large portion of most students' cash flow. No matter what the source, money was a vital part of students' lives.

The Snake Pit is a place where students spend money when late night or between class hunger pains occur.

Rahim Jones looks for the correct book and wonders if the expense is really worth it.

Food usually accounts for taking much of a student's spending money. A pizza is devoured by a starving student.

A student finds that deciding what to choose is hard to do especially since the cost of simple items adds up quickly.

Working at a desk in one of the dorms is a common on-campus job.

After Hours

FSC Steps Out and Comes Alive!

A student enjoys relaxing and listening to music at Kaus.

Although the true purpose of college is learning and studying, by the end of the week all that most students could think of was relaxing and having a good time. After a long week of hard work students needed to break free and let go. The ways students spent their free time were as varied as the type of students at FSC. The weekend began for some on Thursday nights when many chose to go to local hang outs to dance and visit with friends. The most popular local club, Kau-Kau Korner, allowed students to break free of typical stereotypes and show their true colors. Other students felt the need to escape totally free of Lakeland and visit area attractions in either Orlando or Tampa. Other students used their free time to simply catch up on sleep or long over due reading assignments. Many found just being with friends was enough to rejuvenate them for the next week. Whatever activities students chose to occupy their free time, one thing always remains: a good time was had by all.

Two students talk, hang out, and unwind after classes at Kau Kau Korner.

What's Hot!

Trends- Will they last?

The dolphin is a popular design for tattoos on the campus.

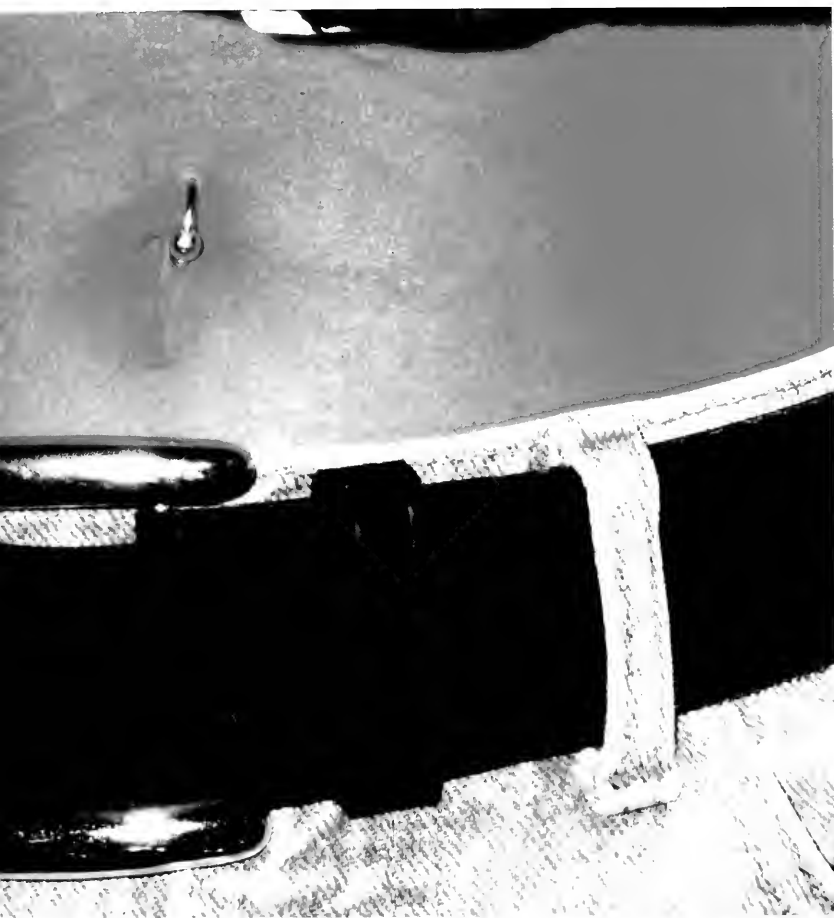

Many girls can be seen wearing these new hair clips in many different styles, sizes, and colors.

Walking to the beat of their own drum, a student treads on to their destination.

Here we get an up close and personal look at Jennifer Rubin's belly button ring.

Shoes of all kinds are trendy with students.

Baby doll shirts and short skirts are two popular clothing trends.

Animal House

Where We Live and Play

A student wonders what all that noise is coming from at the end of the hall.

Students play cards and socialize during an open house.

College was a time of firsts for many students. One of the biggest adjustments that students had to face was the reality of living in a residence hall. Suddenly students found themselves acquiring a roommate and having to deal with living in a building that housed many different types of people. These experiences could be a lot of fun and very enjoyable or in some cases a nightmare. Roommates often times became confidantes and best friends for studying, partying, and laughing. The strangers in the section suddenly become extended family with whom more fun times were shared. Who would ever forget those late night Taco Bell runs or stress relieving water fights? The flipside of living with so many others was learning to be flexible to the needs, wishes, and desires of others. One person may have had an exam the next day while another wanted to celebrate a good grade. Who won? Would there be a study session or party? One benefit of dorm life was the learned art of compromise. When all was said and done, life within the walls of a dorm was an unforgettable but enjoyable adventure.

Two Jenkins residents sit back and relax to watch a little T. V.

Justin Merrit and Chris Braden wrestle in the hallway over whether to study or celebrate.

Weston Nickerson talks to a classmate in the hallway of the Lambda Chi house.

Studying is a common occurrence in many dorm rooms.

The most common thing that students do in their dorm rooms is sleep.

Relationships

It Takes All Kinds

Two students hang out at the picnic tables at a SUB function.

Relationships come in all varieties. The students this year had quite a few. They formed long-lasting friendships with their new roommates and other people in their residence halls. Friendships that are made in college can last forever. The dating scene on campus could be very complicated. The first few weeks proved to be trying on old relationships but potentially great for new ones. There were a variety of new faces to choose from. When asked for her feelings about long-distance relationships, Laura Alden replied "Long-distance relationships can be hard no matter how long two people have been together." A majority of students agreed. Cristina Cobb felt that two people should be friends first, that way they have a chance to get to know each other before they date. Relationships can be a lot of hassle, but they are worth the effort. The people that students meet in college will remain their friends throughout their entire lives.

Rebekah Wills and Scott Crippen spend time together in the lobby of Joseph Reynolds.

Julie Kitchings, Edye Edgins, and Michelle DeBello head back to the Kappa Delta house after quality bonding in the cafe.

Doug Meirdiercks visits Inez Dedeugdin the lobby at Joseph Reynolds.

Two students pull out all the "punches" as they goof around in the halls of Hollis.

Nick Rini and Michelle Lawton smile for they have found understanding in each other.

Matt McMann and Amy Madden have shown that good relationships were built to last.

May Option

A World of Difference

Dave Campo gives a speech outside of the Harlaxton manor.

The month of May was busy for some students. The college offered a month abroad program in England. Students earned six hours by taking two courses. Courses varied from British History to Personal Finance. When not in classes, trips into the town of Grantham, three miles from the manor, were easily made by van. There students would get their banking and shopping done. Weekend excursions took faculty and students away from the manor. Students visited Shakespeare's home in Stratford-on-Avon. They toured the university campuses of Oxford and Cambridge. In Cambridge they paid their respects to the American servicemen who lost their lives in World War II. Students explored the city of London. They traveled by tube, taxi, double-decker buses, or on foot. While in London, they saw the acclaimed musical Les Miserables. The last week of the trip saw students traveling on their own to places such as Ireland, Paris, Venice, Milan, and Budapest. Final exams were followed by a banquet, given in honor of the students. For these students, May Option was an experience of a lifetime.

The Harlaxton Manor is where students stayed during their visit.

Academic Life

Experience

The Scholastics

Academics become a regular part of the students' lives, whether they have to go to class at eight in the morning or two in the afternoon. There is a goal that must be accomplished and work that must be done. Although the work seems to never end, once senior year arrives it all seems worth it. As students obtain their education and head toward graduation, they all get the opportunity to experience the scholastics.

For the past two years President Reuschling has been a very busy man. He never passed up a chance to support the Mocs. Students saw the President at the plays, concerts, and games. He was also seen all over the campus, and in his office by some students. One goal that Dr. Reuschling fulfilled was letting the students know that he cares. He has made many positive changes to the college. Renovations to many of the buildings were made all over the campus last summer. One change that the President put through was allowing refrigerators in the dorm rooms. Dr. Reuschling also opened channels of communication. There is better communication among the administrators, staff, and students, as well as the community. Another positive change was the addition of two new athletic teams that the President oversaw. Welcoming the freshman class into the student body each year has been one of his favorite past-times. President Reuschling has stayed very busy during his first two years, but by doing so he has shown everyone that he truly does care about them.

Seniors Intern

Job hunting, that's what being a senior is all about. No longer are they taking any courses other than those that will give them credits toward their pending major. These students have finally gotten through three years of college and must begin to plan what they will do once the year is over. This means internships for many of them. Some of them do plan to go to graduate school, but also want to find a job to support themselves.

Many waited hopefully to be able to get a job in their field of study. Such is not the case all the time. Sometimes, the field in which a student is looking has no job openings. Then they must look in a field that is similar. Those lucky ones find a job early on in the year.

As one senior commented, "This is the best time of my life. It is just the suspense of not knowing whether you are going to get a job you like or not that is stressful." Still, this is the time that they have been waiting for since their freshmen year. Now, they plan to enjoy it as long as it lasts.

JUNIORS: Finally on the Ball

*"The classes can be a lot harder
because they are more in depth compared to freshmen courses."*

The juniors have finally gotten through with most of their required courses in college and are now well on their way to making their future dreams a reality. It can be stressful, as one junior stated, "The classes can be a lot harder because they are more in depth compared to freshman courses which are more general." They have also found their classes to be a lot more interesting than their first two years. "You learn more," a junior commented, "because the freshman courses are more of a review while the stuff you learn in the harder classes is usually something you never heard of before." Still, these juniors have been able to take it all in stride. This is the time for them to begin thinking about what exactly they plan to do after graduating from college. Some want to go to graduate school and begin to think of what university they wish to attend for that purpose. Some would just as well be satisfied with their four years of college and not worry about getting a doctorate in anything. Either way, the juniors have gotten on the ball and have made speedy progress for their futures.

Sophomores Take CLAST

The sophomores reached that stage where they were no longer new to the way that college works, yet they were still having to take their required courses for graduation. The main difference is that they had to try to get their sixty credits so that they could take their CLAST test and get on with their perspective majors. Hopefully by the time sophomores have reached the end of the year, they have a good idea what they wish to major in and where they want to go in life.

Twice during the year, they had the opportunity to take the CLAST. Usually, they would take a pre-CLAST test in order to give them an idea on just how well they would do.

As one sophomore mentioned, "I'm glad to finally be able to get those courses out of the way and be able to look forward to concentrating more closely on what I want to major in."

Some sophomores found this year to be quite a challenge. A sophomore commented, "The CLAST can seem quite frightening at first, but I did better on it than I thought I would."

Yes, the sophomore year was one full of challenges, but nothing that they could not handle.

Freshmen Go To Class

"College Academics

are so academics, "

comments

a freshman.

The first day of class came along and you were scared to death. You had no idea where your classroom was. You still got lost trying to get from your room to the cafeteria and back. So, you wandered around with a campus map clutched in one hand and a bookbag with a fresh new notebook inside strapped to your shoulder. That first semester of classes can be very difficult for freshmen.

As one freshman commented, "College academics is so different from high school. At first, you really can't see the difference, but when the test results come back and you don't get as good of a grade as you expected to get, then you can tell."

Unless they have taken Advanced Placement Courses in high school, most freshmen are stuck with required courses which have nothing to do with their major. This can also be quite tedious.

As another freshman mentioned, "If I was studying something that I enjoyed then it wouldn't be half as bad."

Yet, these freshmen struggled on through the year and found that they can do well in college and that gave them the strength to carry on.

ROTC: Leadership Excellence

The Reserved Officers Training Corps department had another very successful year. Their motto, "Leadership Excellence", prevailed once again. Each Wednesday afternoon the cadets participated in Leadership Labs. Through these labs the cadets learned the skills needed to become effective leaders in many different situations. Groups of the cadets were given hypothetical situations and had to pull together to figure out and achieve a solution. The Ranger Challenge Team represented the school well this past year.

The team, which was made up of volunteer R.O.T.C. students, competed against other R.O.T.C. programs in Florida and Georgia. On November 3-5, these cadets competed in thirty hours of non-stop military challenge. They placed in the top half of the 24 teams that competed.

The college's R.O.T.C. program has allowed many students to graduate this year with the rank of Second Lieutenant in the United States Army. This in itself is a success that anyone can be proud of.

The Admissions Staff

Works Hard At

Recruiting

New Students

To The College

Throughout

The Year.

The admissions staff had their hands full this year. Besides handling the complete processing of each current student, they processed the thousands of applications sent in by hopeful students. The admissions staff was then challenged to make the final decision of which applicants would get the chance to become students. The staff held many activities to educate prospective students about the college. Throughout the year the admissions staff held four "Day on Campus" events. Students were invited to spend a Saturday on campus taking tours, hearing from the Student Panel, and learning about the benefits of the school. Honors weekend, one of the largest recruiting events of the year, was held twice this past year. Students spent three full days on campus and took full advantage of learning about the college experience. They were given the opportunity to stay in the college dorms, attend any of the functions going on, and take the CLEP examinations. They were offered the full rights of students for the weekend. Groups of high school students also visited the school during the year to find out what the college was like. The admissions office was very busy this year finding prospective students who would be an asset to the college.

The Art Gallery

Everywhere one looked, the world was full of art work; from the colors spreading across the sky at sunset, to the different shades of green in a handful of grass. There were scenes that, when captured with the stroke of a brush, inspired people to revere. There was so much to put on a piece of canvas. If a person were to try to paint it all, it would take several lifetimes to do it.

Here, art was greatly appreciated, as well. The students dabbled in all sorts of art work. Some painted or drew things the way they saw them and others chose to be more surrealistic. There were many talented artists on campus.

The Melvin Art Gallery in the Humanities building displayed the latest of the student's works as well as exhibits from artists outside of school. On the days that they switched the old art with the new, they had a special opening to which everyone was invited to attend.

As one student said, "I just stood there in awe at some of those paintings I saw. There are some really good paintings there." The feeling was mutual with many of the people who go to the art gallery.

Many people were involved in the music department. Some had instrumental talents and some possessed vocal talents. If one were to pass by the Humanities building, one could hear people singing and instruments playing.

It was a life of notes and scales. Students practiced long hard hours and came before audiences to show off their hard work and to give performances of which they could be proud. Some of the performances were incorporated into the Festival of Fine Arts program.

The choir was large this year. Together they practiced, and they truly sang as one. The same went for band. They worked well together. Those who had gone to the band and choir concerts had found them enjoyable.

One student commented, "This year, the choir seems to be doing very well. I really have enjoyed listening to them sing."

As another student mentioned, "It takes a lot of hard work to make that many people sound good together. These students have worked hard and deserve whatever praise they get."

Life on Stage

The lights came on and the actors began to let their different characters unfold before an entranced audience. In about a couple of hours the actors draw them into their make believe world. The people laugh and cry with those on stage. When it is all over, the audience is brought back to the real world and they applaud with enthusiasm for the joy ride they have just experienced. The group known as the Vagabonds are completely in charge of putting the whole theater production together. This year the Vagabonds have put on several productions of good taste. The first semester they started with "Anything Goes" and ended with "The Miss Firecracker Contest." Second semester, they also did Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream". This group has been able to work together well to make each production run smoothly. Many of those who went to see these plays agreed that they were well acted and worth seeing. A lot goes into making the whole set work, yet the Vagabonds make it all look easy.

The Library

*"I can write out my paper
in the library,
type it up,
and get it edited,
without having to leave the building."*

Being in the library to do a research paper has been compared to going on a trek through the jungle. Trying to weave between the tall bookshelves filled with hundreds of books of all sizes just to find that one little book you need could be quite stressful if you did not know what you were doing. Of course, if you have deciphered the "file cabinet" code then you could better search for the information you desired. Then after the search is through, there is the typing and editing to be done. After that, the computer in the library does the rest of the job for you.

As one student mentioned, "The library has a good system. I can do my paper in the library, type it out, and it get it edited without having to leave the building."

Another student added, "I don't even have to bring my own typing paper. There is already some provided by the library that I can use."

The library is also used for students to study for tests. Many find they cannot get peace and quiet anywhere else. It's an important part of life which the students here have enjoyed.

Often times, students enjoy coming to the library to do their work.

Hands On Experience

Remember the little kid who would not accept the fact that the shiny toaster was hot until he burned his little chubby hand? Sometimes, that's the way life is. People need to find out for themselves how things work and why they do. They do not want to take someone else's word for it. That's what lab or hands on work has been for.

For almost every science class a student takes, there is also a lab class that must be taken with it. Usually this lab was once a week and gave the students an opportunity to better understand their course.

Not only are there labs for sciences, but there are also labs for other majors. Such things as computer labs and education labs also helped the students get a feel for their major. Many students found that lab classes were more fun to do than regular lecture courses because they were forced to stay awake and pay attention. As one student put it, "I actually stay awake in my lab. As long as I'm doing something with my hands I can stay awake." Another student added, "I actually learn more in a lab because it seems to make more sense than when a teacher is just lecturing to me."

"I actually

learn more

in a lab

because it seems to make more sense."

"Help me get this one!" Dr. Tripp exclaims to his student, Jennifer Cancienne, as they try to extract specimens from the bay's muddy bottom.

Athletic Life

Experience

The Excitement

Hours of practice sometimes seem like it will never end for the athletes on every team around campus. While thinking of the National Championships, the players push themselves to the limit. Yet it is all leading up to that special day, the big game that everybody has been anticipating for the entire season. Once the stands fill with the anxious supporters and fans, and the cheers are heard for the Mocs, the hard work begins to pay off. The adrenaline starts to pump as the team members run out to the field, the court, the pool, or the course as they focus on what needs to be done. Now sit on the edge of your seat and prepare to experience the excitement.

The Spiking Mocs

Our Side of the Net

The women's volleyball team made an excellent showing this year. They had a strong start and played well right through to the end of their long season. They began their season at almost the start of the school year and played through the first semester. They were a part of four tournaments this year, including the Nineteenth Moccasin Invitational. After losing six of their senior players, this was a building year. The team brought in ten new players including eight freshmen. The freshmen include Heather Carricoffe, Amber Jaekel, Lara Stucke, Jennifer Lipscomb, Tina Quaranta, Brenda Mowell, Nicole Goldstein, and Nikki Alena. The team sports three sophomores (Kathy McManus, Nicki Finch, and Erin Charlton), a junior (Cindy McKinnon), and four seniors (Kathryn Hauge, Michelle Fenner, Noelle Hagenburger, and Tara Becker). With the help of Lois Webb, Alan Segal (the team's coaches), and Malisa Wetmore (the team's trainer), the team will be even stronger in the years to come.

The Snakes in the Grass

The 1995 Striking Mocs soccer team started the season with all eleven starters returning. The Mocs opened the season with an impressive six to zero victory over Clearwater Christian College. The team was young with only three seniors, three juniors, fourteen sophomores, and three freshmen; however, with this young team, the Mocs fared well most of the season. One of the highlights of the year was the nine to two victory over Southeastern to win the Mayor's Cup Match. They also did well at the Presbyterian College Tournament where they were ranked at second place. The Moccasins achieved many of their goals this year.

The members of this year's cross country teams possessed both speed and spirit as they strove for excellence.

With only four Invitationals to compete in for qualification in the Florida Intercollegiate Championships, the cross country team this year went all out. The men's team shared the Southern State Conference title with North Florida while the women's team finished third overall in the Southern State Conference meet. The men's team finished tenth in the NCAA South Regionals held at the University of South Carolina in Spartanburg. This is the first year that the Mocs have won the Southern State Conference. The men's team was led by Henny Schoeman, an SSC first-team selection who finished second place in the NCAA South Regionals race while the women's team was led by Cathy McMahon, who also went to the regionals and finished thirty-fifth, and Kathy Rusher, who led the team in the Southern State Conference by finishing eleventh.

Looking for Another Conference Championship

The men's basketball team this year started off by ranking as the ninth team overall in the NCAA Division II men's basketball pre-season poll conducted by College Sports magazine. This year's team had high ambitions and a strong spirit. Combining their staff of experienced upper-classmen with their rookies' raw talents, they were able to pull off a stunning victory over the more-experienced Russian team, the Red Army. Coming off this high, the team set out to expand their margin of wins over the rest of their non-conference tour. After nearly two months of fine tuning during these games, the team launched themselves into the regular season with a reputation for playing hard and being great competitors. The team based their high goals and expectations heavily upon their veterans. Junior center Andy Robertson, senior forward John Saunders and senior guard Shanaka Weerasooriya were much of the team's driving force. Student groups sponsored ten home games this year to generate interest among students who may normally not get involved in the sport, supporting the school's growing spirit.

Lady Mocs Back from Last Season's NCAA Elite Eight

The Lady Mocs of the basketball circuit made an impressive run at the title this year. Last year, the team had a record of 27-4 up until the Elite Eight. This includes their awesome undefeated appearance in the Sunshine State Conference, a run of fourteen games, and their twenty-six consecutive win streak during the regular season.

The team lost two Seniors from last season, but the eight Freshmen players from last year gained an appreciable run of experience. Expectations were very high for their Sophomore efforts this season, and the fans were not disappointed. The team seemed to come alive on the court with a vigor that their opponents envied and feared.

The Lady Mocs competed against three new opponents in their 1995-1996 non-conference games. Of all nine of their opponents in the non-conference games, Florida Southern led in the series against four opponents and was tied with another.

The Lady Moccasins have become known as a force to be reckoned with under the wing of Head Coach Norm Benn.

NCAA Men's Champs and Sister Team's First Efforts

The Men's Golf Team followed last year's high of winning the NCAA National title with an extraordinary effort. The men's team highlights this year was John Curley, finishing first in the FAU/PGA International and second in the Tournament of Champions. He led the team at the Golf World-Palmetto Dunes Collegiate by ranking twenty-eighth overall. The Lady Moccasins set a precedence this year with the first Women's Golf team in the school's history. The team fared very well for a new team. They competed in four tournaments this season. Even with a mostly-freshmen team, the Lady Mocs were strong competitors throughout the entire series of tournaments. The team fought hard in the four Division One tournaments. Coach Lois Webb stated, "With returning champs Longwood College from Virginia and Rollins College, another national power, in the same region as Florida Southern, competition is tough." The team had many victories in their first year, including two rankings among the top twenty women golfers. Shanna Nagy ranked third with an 80 average and Kristen Hommel ranked thirteenth with an average of 83.

Men's Tennis Returns After Hiatus

This year, the men's tennis team returned to the campus with their eyes gleaming. They set off to clinch the men's team's only post-season bid since 1983.

The tennis club has a winning history on the women's teams, consisting of an NCAA fifth-place finish in 1991, an NCAA seventh-place finish in 1982, and two post-season bids from 1982 through 1990 and again in 1993. The women's tennis team has won nine Sunshine State Championships in 1982 through 1986, 1988, 1990, 1992, and in 1993. Last year the team finished fourth in the SSC, and went 8-8 in the season.

Last Year's NCAA National Champions

In 1995, for the eighth time, the Moccasin Baseball Team earned the NCAA National Championship Title. The team worked hard and played well to bring home their eighteenth NCAA South Regional Championship Title. Team player, Brett Tomko, was named the 1995 Sunshine State conference Male Athlete of the Year. The team had a lot of support not only from the fans, but from a group of students also. The Diamond Girls were there for the players to give them a little bit of moral support. The girls also backed the team up by selling concessions at the games. From Barnett field to far-off diamonds, the baseball players played with all their will and might. Their schedule included an exhibition against a Japanese baseball team. Softball on Speed

The Lady Mocs Reign as SSC Champs for Eleven Years

Can the Lady Moccasins continue their winning streak? For eleven straight years (since its first year in 1985), the fast-pitch softball team has scored victory after victory. Also under the team's belt are three Regional Championships (in 1987, 1989, and again in 1993), an NCAA Third-Place finish (1989), an NCAA Runner-Up finish (1987), and an NCAA National Championship (1993).

The team roared into their twelfth year under fast-pitch rules. Their Head Coach Chris Bellotto has served with the Lady Moccasins since the inauguration of the new rules and has led them through a promising season. This year's team includes four players more than last year's team, expanding from fifteen players to nineteen players. New players this year include Kathy Sangster, Emily Moore, Julianne Coleman, Kristen Larkins, Jaime Bridges, Lori Moore, Pam Lowe, Lisa McNeley, Lisa Richarde, and Amber Jaekel. Also, Katy Courtelyou was promoted to the position of Assistant Coach. She was last year's pitcher and has been named an All-American. She has been selected as GTE's Academic All-American. Shelly Davis has been named All-American twice.

Whether rooting for the Mocassins in one of its myriad incarnations or booing their opposition, our school had lots of fun with their school spirit. Some members of the student body and faculty went above and beyond the confines of "normal" fandom, joining the ranks of one of the school spirit-leading groups. The three groups on campus this year were the Cheerleader Squad, the Diamond Girls, and the Step Team. The Cheerleaders riled up the crowd with dynamic shows and chants that filled everywhere

They went with a sense of excitement and appreciation for the Moccasins. The Step Team attended basketball games, showing off magical moves from the dance floor as a unit. The Step Team also contributed to school spirit outside of sports as they performed on Halloween. The group even won the Best Group prize in the costume contest for their "Thriller" theme. The Diamond Girls supported the baseball team by selling concessions and surprising them with gifts. What spirit!

High-Speed Adventure

The Mocs Strike by Water

The Florida Southern Waterski Team made a promising entrance into this year's season. By competing in the three events of slalom, tricks, and jumping, the team finished fourth overall in the Eckerd College and Florida Southern-hosted tournaments. The team grew this year with the addition of four new members. This includes this year's only female competitor, Susan Stull. These new members, working along with our eight returning veterans, were something to be proud of on Lake Hollingsworth this year.

Recreational Sports- For the Fun of It

Intramural tennis was one of the many fast-paced sports offered this year.

Kim Baker goes to bat and prepares to bring home the runners on base.

Intramural volleyball soon became a heated tournament between the teams involved.

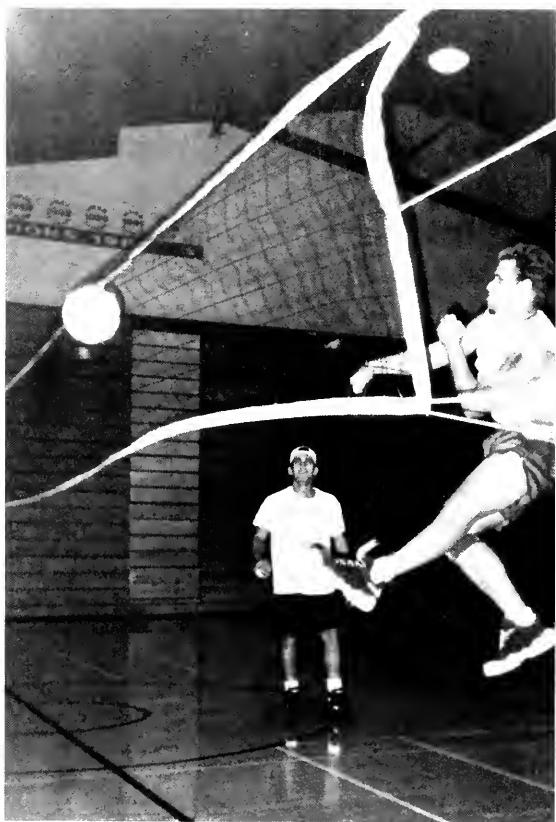

Under the direction of Coach Mark Ritchhart, water skiing has become one of the most popular sports at school. Members of the recreational water ski team receive expert instruction in every phase of water skiing, and many students become adept and skillful in this enjoyable sport. A minor fee each semester entitles members to the use of newly purchased equipment, including an inboard ski boat, skis, wetsuits, an air chair, inner tubes, and life jackets. The drivers and instructors were ski team members Justin Campbell and Brad Sleeman, along with professional kneeboard skier Brian Stubenrach. The sport is a great way to relieve the tension of that killer test under the warm Florida sun!

Julie Benton kicks off to the opponents.

Many athletes graced the volleyball courts for their first time to play in intramural competitions.

Intramural Sports: Friendly Sports Within

This year had an incredible turn-out for intramural sports competitions. With the largest amount of students in ten years, it wasn't too surprising that the school had one of the largest circuits in many years.

With the stress that college life may put on some people, the students needed a way to simply have fun. The intramural competitions were a fast-paced yet fun environment in which students could compete with their peers and relieve some of that tension. The original idea was to involve students who may not have normally "made the team" and to allow people to experience new activities. The teams were also used as training grounds where the players learned and developed skills in leadership ability, athletic ability, and team work. It was a great way to stay physically fit and have fun with friends at the same time.

Anyone Can Play!

An Informal Atmosphere

was a rewarding experience for all who participated. In the intramural range of activities, there was something for everyone. The intramural circuit allowed any number of teams to compete in six different sports. Many fraternities and sororities formed teams. Dormmates formed teams with each other, and some formed teams from a variety of students. With such a diverse mix of players, the games played were more fun as well as more challenging for the returning players as new talent emerged from the freshmen class.

The intramural sports circuit was an integral part of extracurricular activity at the college. Nearly eighty-five percent of the total enrollment participated in some way this year. Win or lose, everyone had a great time playing.

Jeff Foster participates not as a player but as a referee.

Greek Life

Experience

The Unity

There are times in college and in life in general when everyone needs friends to laugh and cry among. Fraternities and sororities form a family for their members, a strong support system for one another. Their support also is displayed in their dedication to their national philanthropies and annual fundraisers. From Bid Day, when students decide which group to pledge, to graduation, when they become official alumni, memories are made and bonds are formed that will last a lifetime. Members learn their history, gain big brothers or little sisters, dance at formals, and live in the same house under common bonds. Sharing these similar links, the brothers and sisters of Greek organizations all stick together to experience the unity.

PI KAPPA PHI

Strong Enough to Care

Pi Kappa Phi was established at Florida Southern on October 16, 1948. The first chapter of Pi Kappa Phi was founded at the College of Charleston, South Carolina on December 19, 1904. Pi Kappa Phi is the only fraternity that has created and supported its own notional outreach project-PUSH America. The project's objective is to help handicapped children. The colors of Pi Kappa Phi are gold, white, and blue. The symbols of Pi Kappa Phi are the star, the lamb, and the bell. Pi Kappa Phi also realizes that "a house, a grip, a badge, a song, an emblem-does not make a fraternity. It is the unseen things- friendship, brotherhood, character, honor, courage, ideals- that make the fraternity and the man." This is what Pi Kappa Phi instills in its fraternity.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Phi Alpha

Sigma Alpha Epsilon was founded on the banks of the Black Warrior River on March 9, 1856 at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa. The fraternity is dedicated to the principles of a true gentleman and embracing eternal friendships. The Florida Gamma Chapter, which was founded on November 12, 1949, emphasizes the ideals of loyalty, zeal, and devotion. The lion represents the fraternity's power and vitality. As Minerva, the patron goddess of the fraternity, holds Leo docile at her feet, she symbolizes the wisdom to subdue the passions and instincts of nature. Together they represent strength and virtue united.

GREEK WEEK

"Let The Games Begin"

Enthusiasm and unity was the focus of this year's Greek Week. Fraternities and sororities were paired up and prepared for some friendly competition. The week gave each group the opportunity to get to know each other better while participating in fun activities. The competition was kicked off with a banner contest at a SUB sponsored movie event. On the following night, the teams came out fighting at the water war. The events continued at Greek Rock, where the teams got a chance to show off their lip sync and dance talents. The week ended with the Greek Games, which was a series of events that included a dizzy bat relay, mattress race, tug-of-war, and a tricycle race with a picnic that included a performance by Anaerobe. Events such as the penny wars, which raised money for a local charity, and the Gotcha Games went on all week. Also, throughout the week, sorority and fraternity members stayed hot on the trail of the "Go Greek" button. After a week of hard work, fun, and lots of competition, the team of Kappa Delta and Pi Kappa Alpha emerged victorious after winning the mystery points for the best show of Greek unity. Their efforts and winning spirit personified the true intentions of Greek Week. Overall, Greek Week 1995 went smoothly, as all the groups involved had a great time and learned more about each other.

Club Life

Experience

The Leadership

From the Student Union Board to the Departmental societies, students have a broad range of clubs and organizations with which they can join and become actively involved. Within the clubs, students can gain leadership ability and organizational skills that will benefit them in the job market. There are clubs to provide entertainment, clubs that honor work well done, and clubs that work to improve campus life. The events that students participate in will lead to lifelong memories of laughter and good times. Friends, fun, and opportunity are all that anyone could ask for. It's all part of campus life. What would college be like if students couldn't experience the leadership?

Theta Chi Beta is the religion honorary society, which promoted the academic study of religion, and honored those who have excelled in the study of it. In order to be initiated one must have completed twelve hours of religion and maintained a "B" average. Sigma Rho Epsilon is a fraternity founded on service. The organization explored issues in the field of religious social action and stresses projects during the school year. Membership into the organization is based on interest and participation. Kappa Mu Epsilon's purpose was to further the interest of mathematics in schools which placed emphasis on the undergraduate program. This was to help the undergraduate realize the important role that mathematics played in the development of the western civilization. In order to become a member one must have completed at least three semesters of the college course work and rank in the top thirty-five percent of the class. Members must have obtained an average of "B" or better in all mathematics courses including at least one semester of calculus. The Society of Physics Students was the only physics society designed for students. Membership was open to anyone interested in physics. The Society of Physics Students was essentially a self-governed society which served the interests of physics students. It was formed April 22, 1968, from the union of AIP student sections and Sigma Pi Sigma. The membership requirement was an interest in physics.

Groups on campus like Sigma Rho Epsilon made it possible for diverse groups of students to be brought together with the purpose of trying to understand life and those around us better.

The Association of Women Students sponsors the annual Autumn Elegance fashion show to raise money for scholarships.

Kappa Delta Pi was founded in order to recognize those who offer outstanding contributions to education. Membership is based on exhibition of commendable personal qualities, worthy educational ideals, and sound scholarship. One must have a sincere intention to pursue teaching, have maintained a 3.0 cumulative average, better than a 3.0 in the major field, and have completed twelve semester hours of education of major courses for secondary. The American Advertising Federation college chapter program was the only national affiliation offered exclusively to advertising students. The primary objectives of the AAF were to encourage young people to enter advertising as a career and to enhance the quality of advertising education. To be eligible for membership a student must be interested in the fields of advertising and public relations while having maintained a high degree of excellence in academic studies. All Campus Fellowship is one of the religious organizations on campus. The fellowship groups on campus provide students with a way to spend their time whether it be spent studying in the Jackson Religion Building, or during Bible study. Fellowship groups, such as this one, provide common ground for many students and a way to introduce oneself to college as well as becoming acquainted with religion. The Association of Women Students is a group of women who sponsor the Miss Florida Southern pageant, as well as providing a number of other services to inform women on campus of current social issues involving them and their future. The AWS provided many inspirational speakers on topics such as domestic violence. The purpose of the Citrus and Ornamental Horticulture club was to provide students with a mutually cooperative medium for contributing to the Citrus Institute and the college community as a whole. The club functioned to maintain good rapport with alumni of the department as well as with individuals in the citrus industry, and other horticultural enterprises in the state.

Interests

The women's Club Soccer Team provided female students with the opportunity to participate in a fun and competitive atmosphere, while playing the game of soccer. The team travelled to places such as Tampa and Daytona for games and also hosted a number of teams at home. Practices were held twice a week, and although the level of experience on the team was quite varied, everyone enjoyed playing as a team. The Commuter Student Association was committed to ensuring that living off campus does not mean missing out on campus life. This organization is open to all commuters and any other students who are interested in participating in the activities of CSA. The Commuter Student Union provided a place for commuters to stay between classes and was equipped with study areas as well as recreational equipment. The Criminology Club was designed to stimulate interest among student and faculty in the field of criminology. It acquainted students with the professional career opportunities by encouraging interaction between students and professionals already in the field of criminal justice. Members participated in local, state, national, and international crime-related meetings and forums as well as informal, social events in which students, professionals, and faculty met. This organization is open to all interested in crime-related studies. The International Students Association was open to international students and all other students who wanted to learn about other cultures. The ISA participated in many areas of college life by bringing a "world dimension" to campus life.

Women's Soccer gave students like Kerri Hammernick, and Beth Fisher a better chance to get involved without being involved in a varsity level sport.

Teamwork

Literature

Stephanie Lance shows that it takes hard work and dedication in order to meet deadlines for the Intelachen.

The Interlachen provided a visual and written history for all students and faculty to use as a reminder of their time on campus. By compiling pictures and stories from a wide variety of areas and people the yearbook staff could capture the essence of college life so that those who were involved would enjoy it for years to come. Being a member of the yearbook staff meant that one was responsible for representing all the diverse personalities on campus, as well as all the activities that took place. The Intramural Board governed the intramural sports system. Members were responsible for refereeing intramural games and helping Mr. Larry Powell prepare the teams so that intramurals could go on. Without this organization it would be virtually impossible for the games to be held. The Mechanicals was the Humanities club on campus. Their goal was to promote and enhance the cultural awareness of those interested in the structure and literature of the English language, to provide opportunities for members to broaden their knowledge and understanding of the role that literature plays in society, and to apply that knowledge and understanding to its members daily lives. The primary goal of the Natural High Team was to help students and faculty alike, to find constructive ways to spend their free time. They promote study breaks, eating healthy, exercise, and good ways to get rid of stress. The Natural High Team, along with the help of other groups on campus sponsor many workshops and projects throughout the year. One of their biggest functions was the Fitness Fest which was put on by them with the help of SUB.

While putting the finishing touches on a layout, Jessica Cooper realizes that picking the perfect picture is not an easy task.

Discovery

Service

The National Panhellenic Conference was made up of representatives from each of the sororities. This organization was formed in hopes of uniting the sororities and to provide a way for the groups to come together to discuss different topics which may arise. They work hard together to make sure big events such as rush and Greek Week run smoothly. Resident Advisors are the people who live with boarding students and help them with problems that may arise during the year. They help get the new students settled in and situated with their new environment. Together, with the orientation week leaders, they are in charge of O-Week and making sure everything goes well. They serve as mentors and friends that help to form great memories that will last not only through the year, but for a lifetime. The purpose of Students for the Exploration and Development of Space was to educate students and the general public about the benefits of space exploration and development, as well as to provide a forum for the discussion and exchange of ideas related to the matters involving space. The Students Offering Service program offered a wide variety of volunteer service opportunities both on the campus and in the local community. Students had the opportunity to volunteer by taking care of animals at the S. P. C. A., tutor students of all ages, or spend time as a big brother or sister to a younger child. Through volunteerism, students were able to develop a wide range of skills and interest. They also enriched and applied classroom knowledge, explored new career choices, and became more aware of community needs. The Pre-Law Society functioned as an organization to educate and prepare students interested in legal careers. Activities included seminars on how to apply to law school, law school preparation tips, and field trips to legal institutions.

Students Offering Service took children to Lowry Park Zoo in Tampa as part of their pledge to volunteering their time.

Culture

The clubs and organizations that were offered to the student body allowed them to find that special group, and apparently these students agree.

Shades of Color is an organization committed to unifying in spirit, mind, and heart persons of different cultures and races. Membership is open to all persons on the campus, including faculty, staff, and students. The only requirement for membership was an interest in others. The purpose of the Spanish Club is to promote other cultures in an informal atmosphere. Membership was given to those with some knowledge of the language of the club. The Southern Ambassadors give weekly tours and represent the school at various functions. Southern Ambassadors are chosen because they represent the best qualities that the students have to offer. The Vagabonds are the dramatic production group, open to all students who showed potential ability in acting and writing. The group presented plays from the professional theatre and experimental plays directed and produced by members of the group. Their purpose is to produce four Festival of Fine Arts performances per year. They also try to sponsor variety and talent shows as well as other activities involving the Theatre Department throughout the year. The Wesley Fellowship is a United Methodist church group that holds weekly meetings in order to discuss social issues on a religious based platform. The group provides an excellent opportunity to gain friendships and a stronger handle on ones faith.

People Life

Experience

The Crowd

The cafeteria, the classroom, the dorm, or just around town - there is no escaping the crowds of students. Face after face, no matter where one may be, it is easy to find someone one knows from campus. One will never know as many people in one place in their lifetime as one will know on campus. As the year rolls on, students are quick to make close friends and have meaningful relationships with the people around them that they will treasure forever. With these people, their lives at school are filled with many memorable times and growing experiences. So, go ahead, turn the page, and experience the crowd.

Seniors

are on the move.

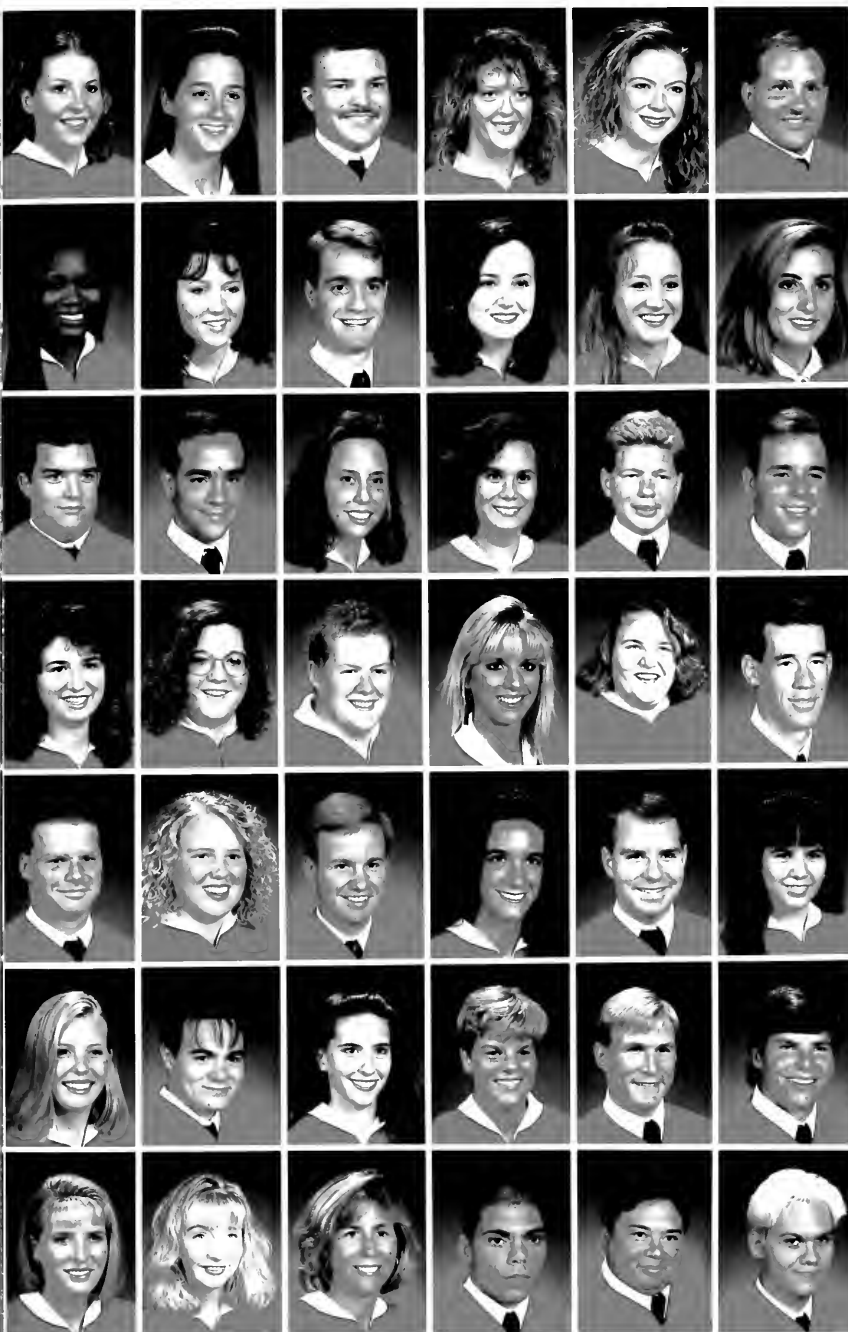

After four long years of Cafe meals, study halls, and SUB study breaks, the seniors in the graduating class of 1996 were on the move. In a world where very few things could be counted on as definite, the seniors made sure that getting that college degree was one that could. Many thanks to all the professors that helped pass them with D averages; and thanks to the security office for making them glad that they lived in Lakeland rather than Los Angeles. Where, oh where, would they ever be without the comfort and peace of mind that the security escort key chain offered? No one knew just how much it would come to mean to them. The year was an absolute blast, and with only days left to go, there was an air of madness all around. With graduation just around the bend, seniors kicked back, relaxed, and enjoyed the last days of their college undergraduate careers. Reminiscing on times gone by, they realized that they had been in college to witness a new president's inauguration here at FSC and in the United States; and most recently, they had seen a team which was once America's laughing stock go on to win the World Series. A lot had happened within the last four years and the memories will never leave them as they leave the school behind. These seniors are on the move, and they'll be coming soon to the job market near you. Congratulations, seniors, on a job well done.

Senior Len Brutcher enjoys the aroma of the Cafe as he casually strolls in for his daily lunch break.

Senior Angela Zipperer closes her eyes and tries not to breathe as she warns us that today's meal is liver. For every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction ... huh, Len?

Where do we go from here?

Once the seniors finished their undergraduate programs at college, they were weary about getting out into the "real world." After that Bachelor's Degree, where would life take them next? Many seniors took the graduate school entrance exams like the GRE, GMAT, and LSAT. With hopes of scoring high enough to get accepted into the schools of their choices, seniors spent many sleepless nights for the sake of preparation. Hopeful that all went well, seniors came to the realization that what's done had been done and that now there was no turning back. The only question seemed to be: Where did they go from here? Whether entering the job market or continuing on to graduate school, the graduates knew that they had been well prepared by the teaching and mentoring by the faculty throughout the years. They had completed all of their major requirements and were having night sweats and visions of walking down the aisle in red. Their day had come. Were they ready? You'd better believe it! Were they ready for the future? The answer was uncertain; but, through lessons on life they'd learned in their four years, they were sure to be able to handle all of life's little obstacles. Look out world! Here they come. Even if they didn't have a clue about what tomorrow held, they did know one thing for sure. They had so much to be proud of because they were the class of 1996.

Farewell

It's so hard to say goodbye!

The senior year was one filled with the excitement and anticipation of things to come. New lives would be started; jobs would be established; and, most importantly, the college lives the seniors had come to know and love so well would be replaced by a totally new experience. The year was the ending and the beginning. The term "senioritis" was heard amongst professors and students alike as giddy thoughts of what was to come pervaded their every moment.

Where would they go from here? Some students were more sure than others. Frequent visits to the career placement office were made in hopes of a smooth transfer from college to the working world. Talks of what was to come were prevalent in conversations with friends. Warnings and wishes were issued by both teachers and peers. For seniors, stress came from every direction as so many things needed to be accomplished in what seemed to be a brief amount of time. Friends that stood by each other for those strenuous college years would be moving on, too. Promises to keep in touch after graduation passed were made without regard to the hundreds of miles that would soon separate seniors. Although at times the seniors thought that they would never make it, their time finally arrived. As those who cared most looked on, members of the graduating class walked slowly down the aisle and felt the tassels brush lightly against their faces. It didn't bother them, though, for they knew that with that itchy robe and goofy hat came accomplishment ... accomplishment that set them apart.

They were the future. The future was now.

Friends Forever! Catrena Best, Stacey Proctor and Holly Hartwig spend quality time together. Keep smiling ladies. You're beautiful!

Getting Involved

Along Came The

Juniors

As the juniors entered their third year of college last year, they learned quickly that becoming involved with their major would be a very time consuming process. After making a life altering decision their sophomore year, the juniors had to schedule some serious classes in their area of study. Along with filling the basic requirements for each major, students began in their junior year scheduling what would eventually earn them over thirty hours in the major of their choice. The juniors found that they spent much time in their departments talking with professors, other students, or just independently studying since they had become more involved in their major. Most did not complain of the hard work required of them, though, since they found their classes junior year to be the most interesting to them. Freshman and sophomore years had been spent fulfilling graduation requirements and with the coming of their junior year, the students felt the time had come to concentrate on what the future had in store for them.

Juniors

The year to be caught up in the middle of the commotion.

As freshmen they were overwhelmed by the novelty of college life. Then they began to adjust. As sophomores, they began to get into the swing of things. As seniors they'll be realizing the freedom of almost being done with college. Ah, but the junior year. Yes, like a middle child, the junior year left students somewhere in the middle. Karli Ross recalled, "I thought it was all so simple. But, suddenly, I realized that this was me and that this really was college." Juniors found themselves in the inevitable position of being passed the college "wonder years" which the freshmen and sophomores experience in their first two years and yet unable to reach that relief of the final senior year. For many juniors, this made their third year seem to drag on a bit more than their previous college years.

Countdown

We're on our way to the top.

The countdown to graduation began with upper level classes and a large dedication to the juniors' major areas of study. Right from the start of the year, the juniors found that the crunch to get good grades and credit hours had already begun. As anticipation for the future and what it might hold filled the atmosphere, the juniors had to seriously begin contemplating what their plans for the future would be. Many juniors faced the fear that they wouldn't graduate on time or they would not be able to get an upper level class which they needed. They tried their best to put their fears aside as they had to concentrate on their studies and work hard to pull the grades which they wanted on their college transcript. As the workload grew, the juniors looked towards their future as the senior class of 1997.

These guys have it all together. Posing for the camera can be lots of fun, but friends are what make it special.

A Step Up

From a follower
to a leader.

With their first year in college behind them, sophomores made an important transition. Many second year students took on leadership positions. There were twenty sophomores that helped out as O-Week leaders, assisting the new students on campus. Nicole Williams made this comment on being an O-Week leader. "This year started off with the leaders taking more responsibility; we had a tremendous amount of leadership in one week. It was quite draining but worth the experience." Being comfortable seemed to be the number one reason why sophomores were more likely to take the leadership positions. The students had their first year to get acquainted with the other students around campus and to check out all of the clubs and organizations. At the end of the second semester most organizations held their elections and it was then that these students, who had gained experience throughout the year, could come forward and run for a position. The leadership skills which the sophomores acquired by helping out during O-Week or holding an office will benefit them throughout the rest of their lives.

Decisions

They are a major part of life.

College students have many important decisions they must make; the most important would be choosing their major. Many sophomores had their core requirements completed by their freshman year or by the end of first semester. With their core classes behind them, the students had to make a choice soon. There were many different areas the students could choose from, making the decision even harder. Many students were unsure of their future plans and had a hard time making this choice. There were some sophomores that came to school with a major and started to take their major classes. Some of those students soon realized that their first choice was not the right one for them. "I came here thinking that I would major in Biology, but when I started taking elective courses, I realized that I was really interested in Criminology," commented sophomore Tracy Meeker. Most students did feel comfortable in their major classes and started to become more involved in their departments. The sophomore year was a year of decisions for college students.

Back Home

a familiar place.

Being a returning student had its advantages. The nerves sophomores once had as freshmen were put to ease when they saw the familiar faces of friends. To many students, college was their home away from home. When it was time to return to school, sophomores were able to look forward to seeing the friends they made during their first year. Since students had their friends to think about, they easily forgot the idea that studies would soon resume. Another benefit which sophomores experienced was that they had become comfortable with the campus and knew their way around. Even though most sophomores were not looking forward to classes, at least they knew their schedules and professors. Most likely the students had already had one professor or had heard about classes and professors from friends who had them. Returning to campus as a sophomore was more than coming back to school, it was like coming home.

Wake Up Call

Students come to term with the reality of college.

Last year the sophomore class learned that it would definitely be a year of hard work and dedication. It was out with the freshman state of mind, where everything was for fun, and in with the idea that they would have to buckle down and be prepared to face the work they had to do with a strong mind. The sophomores were all very busy taking core classes that would prepare them for the Clast test. Along with these required classes came required papers that would fulfill the Clast writing component. Many professors would fulfill this component by placing essay questions on exams, yet many others assigned term papers to the students. Sophomore Lynette Peterson said she believed term papers "helped make the brain work on a deeper, analytical level." After many long hours of work and writers block, the sophomores came to that point in the year when their term papers were complete and all they had left was the Clast itself. By the end of the sophomore year, the class had put in much time and effort towards their education. The most important lesson was that the future was within grasping reach.

O-Week

A new beginning with the Southern Republic.

Before school started, the freshmen began receiving letters from students called O-Week Leaders. These people promised a fun week that would introduce freshmen to life at their new school. Upon arriving, the freshmen were assigned groups in which they would compete for the title of O-Week Champion. This year the theme was Southern Republic and events included a Banana Split Safari, Talent Show, Club Tacky Dance, and Playfair. Freshman Kerri Hamernick stated, "O-Week was a great chance to meet people and I had a lot of fun." This seemed to be the prevailing attitude among most freshmen. Between mini-classes and tips for surviving college life, the freshmen began to adjust to their new freedom. If overwhelmed at first, O-Week definitely helped rid people of any fear about life at college.

These elephant girls from Allan Spivey show their spirit before heading to Club Tacky.

Freshman Justin Price has a big smile for the Southern Republic during O-Week.

Moving In

Putting everything in its place.

Before O-Week, classes, or that first night in the dorm, all of the freshmen had to do one thing-move in. For most it was quite a change, to share such a small space with another person, and it seemed impossible that everything would fit into their nine by twelve cubicle. However, everyone got moved in and began unpacking. Posters were hung, clothes put into closets, and beds made in an attempt to turn dorm rooms into homes away from home. When everyone was settled in and the nearest bathroom and shower found, the real fun began. Everyone had to make sure they had enough time to get ready for class in the mornings. No longer were Mom and Dad around to make sure they got up in time. Living in a dorm meant being independent and moving in was just the beginning for the freshmen class of 1999.

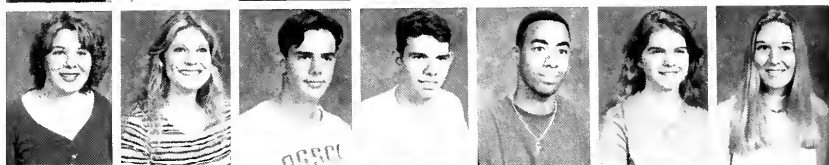

For Laura Alden, meeting her Resident Advisor, Monica Martin, was an important part of moving in.

A freshman and her father take a break from moving in for a snack in the lobby of Joseph Reynolds.

Dating

Finding that special someone to count on.

The cafeteria. A party. The library. Your history class. What do all of these things have in common? They are all good places to meet a date. Dating is a big part of most college students lives, and everyone seems interested in either hanging out, going to dinner, or even studying with that special someone. While a long-term relationship may not be what everyone wants, a good friend of the opposite sex is definitely important. Coming to college for the freshmen opened new doors for meeting a lot of new people. As phone numbers were exchanged and promises were made, the dating scene began.

Scott Crippen and Becca Wells were happy to find each other amid the confusion of the first few weeks of school.

Gretchen Swartzlander waits by the phone with hopes that someone special will call her.

Roommates

Learning to live together and love each other.

For most freshmen, the hardest part of college was moving away from home. This was the first time for them to be on their own and possibly the first time of having to share a room. Of course, it was much easier to bypass this problem by getting a private room, but for those who had to share their space, coping with a roommate came into the picture. Among the guys and girls interviewed, all were happy and satisfied with their dormmates. In fact, some wondered how they were matched so perfectly. Having a roommate was more than just deciding who gets the "better" side of the room. It meant learning to cooperate and respect each other's habits and moods. For some, it may have been a security to be able to always have someone to share experiences with at the end of the day. Hopefully, those first-time dorm experiences will be life-long friendships.

Knowing each other from high school, roommates Stephanie Moss and Christina Cobb were happy to be together.

The

Southern experience

Experience the world with everything gleaned from one's stay at Florida Southern. The unique opportunities offered only to the students of Florida Southern gives them an edge that only they together can share and understand. The friends that are made and the wisdom that is gained is more than enough to send one on to continue their journey through life as they have been through the Southern Experience.

Anthony Schaaf, Paul Chapman, Anthony LoSchiavo, and Jamie Brennan finish up another meal in the cafe.

A student relaxes in J. R.'s lobby as she waits for a friend to run errands.

Two students come well prepared for the usual afternoon rains.
They share an umbrella as they head toward the bookstore.
